

Daisy and the trouble with Jack

Kes Grey

Lexile level: 800

The trouble with Jack Beechwhistle is he's a boy.

The trouble with boys is they are so immature, apart from my friend Dylan. Dylan is a boy who lives in my street. He's not immature at all, because he's ten. Jack Beechwhistle isn't ten, he's about two. Well, he acts about two.

Do you know what Jack Beechwhistle keeps telling everyone at school? That he is a secret agent. How silly is that? I mean, if he's a secret agent, how come he can't keep it a secret?

Jack says that the only reason we are safe is because of him, like he's some kind of world children protector or something. If he's such a world super children protector and everything, how come I've seen his bottom?
